

1. The Little Prince

– A Simple Story with a Big Message

The story begins when a pilot's airplane crashes in the desert. While he tries to fix his plane, a strange little boy appears. The boy says, "Please, draw me a sheep."

The pilot is surprised. He hasn't drawn anything in years, but he tries. He draws some sheep, but the boy says, "No, this one is too sick." "No, this one is too old."

Finally, the pilot draws a box and says, "The sheep is inside the box." The little prince smiles. "That's perfect!"

This shows us something special. The little prince sees with his heart, not just his eyes. He believes in things even if he can't see them.

The little prince comes from a small planet with three volcanoes and a beautiful rose. He loves his rose very much, but she can be proud and difficult. At first, he is sad because she is not perfect. But later, he learns that love means caring and being responsible, even when someone is not perfect.

On his journey, the little prince visits other planets. He meets grown-ups who care too much about power, money, or numbers. One man is busy counting stars, but he never enjoys them. The prince doesn't understand why adults forget what really matters in life.

When he comes to Earth, he meets a fox. The fox teaches him something important:

“You can only see clearly with your heart. What is important is invisible to the eye.”

The prince doesn't understand at first, so the fox explains, “It's the time you spent on your rose that makes her special. You are responsible for what you love.”

Then, the little prince understands. The most important things in life — like love and friendship — can't be seen with your eyes. You feel them with your heart.

2. Little Red Riding Hood

Once upon a time, there was a sweet little girl who was loved by everyone, especially her grandmother. One day, her mother asked her to take a basket of food to her grandmother, who lived in a house deep in the forest. Before she left, her mother reminded her, "Remember, stay on the path and don't talk to strangers."

Little Red Riding Hood put on her red cloak, grabbed the basket, and went happily on her way. As she walked through the forest, she met a wolf. The wolf was very sneaky and asked her, "Where are you going, little girl?"

"I'm going to visit my grandmother," she replied, "She's sick, and I'm bringing her some food."

The wolf thought for a moment and then said, "Why don't you pick some flowers for her along the way? It will make her very happy."

Little Red Riding Hood liked the idea and started picking flowers in the woods. Meanwhile, the wolf ran quickly to her grandmother's house. He knocked on the door, and when the grandmother opened it, he jumped in and locked her in a closet. Then, he dressed in her clothes and climbed into her bed, waiting for Little Red Riding Hood to arrive.

When Little Red Riding Hood finally reached the house, she noticed something strange. "Grandmother, what big ears you have!" she said.

"All the better to hear you with, my dear," replied the wolf in a deep voice.

"Grandmother, what big eyes you have!" Little Red Riding Hood said, feeling more confused.

"All the better to see you with, my dear," said the wolf, trying to sound sweet.

"Grandmother, what big teeth you have!" Little Red Riding Hood exclaimed, now very scared.

"All the better to eat you with, my dear!" the wolf shouted, jumping out of the bed and trying to grab her.

Just then, a huntsman who was passing by heard the noise and rushed into the house. He saw the wolf and quickly chased him away, saving Little Red Riding Hood and her grandmother. The huntsman let the grandmother out of the closet, and she was very happy to be safe.

Little Red Riding Hood learned a valuable lesson that day: always listen to your parents and stay on the path. And from then on, she was more careful when walking through the forest.

3. Jack and the Beanstalk

Once upon a time, in a small village, there lived a poor boy named Jack and his mother. They didn't have much. In fact, the only thing they owned was a cow that gave them milk. But one day, the cow stopped producing milk, and they didn't know what to do. Jack's mother said, "Jack, we have to sell the cow to buy food. Take her to the market." So Jack took the cow and started walking to the market. On his way there, he met an old man who said, "I can trade you some magic beans for your cow."

Jack was curious but a little unsure. "Magic beans?" he asked. The old man nodded and said, "These beans can grow into a giant beanstalk that reaches all the way up to the clouds. It's a rare gift. I promise they are worth more than your cow." Jack thought about it. His family was poor, and they needed money. But the idea of magic beans was exciting. So, he agreed and gave the old man the cow in exchange for the beans.

When Jack got home, his mother was angry. "What have you done? We need the money, not these silly beans!" she shouted. She threw the beans out the window in frustration and sent Jack to bed without dinner. The next morning, Jack woke up and looked outside. To his surprise, a huge beanstalk had grown overnight, reaching all the way up into the sky, far above the clouds. Jack was amazed. He decided to climb the beanstalk. It was tall and thick, and Jack climbed higher and higher until he reached the top. There, he found a land in the sky, full of strange and magical things.

Jack began to explore and soon came across a giant's castle. He knocked on the door, and a giant woman answered. "What do you want, boy?" she asked.

"I'm hungry," Jack said, "Do you have anything to eat?"

The giant woman felt sorry for him and said, "You must leave quickly. My husband, the giant, comes home soon. He's very dangerous!" Jack thanked her and ran inside. He hid when he heard heavy footsteps approaching. The giant soon entered and roared, "Fee-fi-fo-fum, I smell the blood of an Englishman!" He sniffed the air but didn't see Jack. The giant sat down and began counting his gold coins. Jack saw the giant's treasure and quietly grabbed a handful of gold coins. He then ran back to the beanstalk and climbed down to the ground. When he reached the bottom, he showed his mother the gold coins, and they were able to live more comfortably.

But Jack's adventure wasn't over. The next day, Jack climbed the beanstalk again. This time, he went into the giant's castle and found a golden harp that played beautiful music on its own. He took the harp and ran back down the beanstalk. The giant, who had noticed his harp was missing, chased Jack down the beanstalk. But Jack was faster. He chopped down the beanstalk with an ax just as the giant was coming down. The giant fell to the ground, and Jack and his mother were safe.

With the gold and the harp, Jack and his mother lived happily ever after. They no longer had to worry about being poor, and Jack promised never to be greedy again.
